

ABSTRACT

A fuel drain structure in a fuel line comprising a bypass channel for connecting a fuel influx side and a fuel efflux side of a regulator, and a rotary valve for opening and closing the bypass channel, contributing to a prevention of fuel remaining in the fuel
5 line from entering the engine when the engine stops running, and minimization of pollution occurring when the engine is re-started.